“ I guess you know your dad was dear to my heart. He could never quite get to places on time but he still came through. We'd be out playing at grandpa's and come running..."uncle homer's here!!" He always seem to liven up the party...always joking around. After mom died I started writing him to keep in touch...I still had a part of mom talking to him. He sent me his memoirs and true to fashion he writes just like he talks. You can't help but grin reading them. Sorry for all of your loss. Watching him at his birthday party was like seeing grandpa sitting there. I am so glad I could make it. Thanks to Marnee we have a copy of the video. There will be an empty chair at the reunion this year. xo Norma###imported-begin###norma overton###imported-end###

“ Just thought you all should know how dear Uncle Homer was to me...and that he was the surviving Elder of the family. I'll always cherish his ever-smiling face, his laugh, his sense of humor, and his upbeat attitude, even when life wasn't so wonderful. He was always excited to see you, no matter who you were. And if he couldn't remember your name, by darned if he didn't fake it, and smile doing so! He reminded me of my Grandma. Almost two of a kind, they were; brother and sister; close to their families and to each other. I'll always remember at the last couple of reunions someone saying, "Hey, Uncle Homer's here!", or "Is Uncle Homer coming?" That's just how special he was.##imported-begin##LeAnne Tanner##imported-end##
