“ My mom was the most free spirited crazy gal I will ever know. She lived life on her terms, and her way without worrying what anybody would think. She was frustrating and yet you couldn't help wanting to love her. I've spent my life wondering how she could be so care free with 6 kids in tow. She was a mom but not in any traditional sense as we were left to learn how to do life while she was actually doing hers much of the time, but we all survived because she had my grandmother walking right behind her thru it all. She naturally drew people to her, and always gave everything she could. My mom is the definition of a hippie, crazy jeans, gorgeous hair, kindness, drugs, alcohol, good music and free loving life everyday. Now that I'm older and less concerned about childhood things, her worth is in her spirited way of getting thru life with good music and finding a reason to smile thru the hard stuff. She might have been the beauty that broke a 199 hearts but she also gave hers. I wish I could have saw past her crazy mom choices and got to know her as a woman more, she could have taught us kids something about relaxing and peace. I love you mom and even though we are very different your still a big piece in my heart.
